“Jasper Graves here with a summary of the case so far. The more I look into this case, the more intrigued I become. The four suspects all had the means to pull off this operation. They also all lack a credible alibi, which is most peculiar. While such things happen in books and movies-often for dramatic effect-the real world is more straightforward. So, either I have stumbled into a mystery straight out of a novel, or there is more going on here than meets the eye. Another elephant in the room I need to address is that all suspects lied in their police interviews. All of them are hiding something. Only someone trained in Social Anthropology, such as myself, could see it. One or more of those secrets may be the key in my hunt for The Queen's Eye, but none of them will lower their guard around me long enough to let their masks slip. Yet, as I have learned over the years, no one can keep a mask up forever. There are always places we feel like we can be ourselves, and once I find out where that is for each of the suspects, I will be one step closer to unraveling this mystery.”

“What? Oh, someone found me, thank goodness. Listen, you have to hurry. I think Chris is going to try and leave town. But he doesn’t know that I put an air tag tracker on his car. You will need my phone. I think Chris threw it in the safe. I don’t know the code, but I think I heard him type it in a few times. I scratched out what I heard on a tile behind the toilet. But you will need my journal to understand what is written. I hid it. Look under the sink to find out where. Be careful. There is more going on here than meets the eye.”

The bold/underlined words below are the words Jasper says in his video while touching his hat.

“Jasper Graves here with a summary of the case so far. The more I look into this case, the more intrigued I become. The four suspects all had the means to pull off this operation. They also all lack a credible alibi, which is most peculiar. While such things happen in books and movies-often for dramatic effect-the real world is more straightforward. So, either I have stumbled into a mystery straight out of a novel, or there is more going on here than meets the eye. Another elephant in the room I need to address is that all suspects lied in their police interviews. All of them are hiding something. Only someone trained in Social Anthropology, such as myself, could see it. One or more of those secrets may be the key in my hunt for The Queen's Eye, but none of them will lower their guard around me long enough to let their masks slip. Yet, as I have learned over the years, no one can keep a mask up forever. There are always places we feel like we can be ourselves, and once I find out where that is for each of the suspects, I will be one step closer to unraveling this mystery.”
